

Titus Letaapo is a champion of the community conservation model in Northern Kenya, with over 19 years in conservation and community development. Now support Namunyak wildlife Community Conservancy as Director of community and programs at the Sarara Foundation (TSF).

In this capacity, Titus has helped develop successful conservation strategies, spearheaded collaboration between the County Governments and communities, and played a key role in promoting peace between the different ethnic groups in Samburu and neighbouring communities. His work is not only helping create the conditions for sustainable socio-economic development, but also helping to conserve and protect critically endangered species.

TSF is a Kenya based NPO working to support a long-term paradigm shift designed to catalyze a healthy, resilient and prosperous landscape in which both indigenous people and wildlife can thrive for multiple generations to come.

“Through the Conservancy, communities in Namunyak are realizing the importance of wildlife conservation. They can now adequately manage their rangelands, boost their economies and promote sustainable development by protecting the diverse wildlife they share the landscape with”.

Titus is co-founder of the GEO Indigenous Alliance.
