

Teodora C. Hasegan holds a PhD in anthropology from Binghamton University (State University of New York, US) and a certificate in Indigenous Peoples' Rights granted by the Human Rights Education Associates (HREA) and the Human Rights Centre of the United Nations-mandated University for Peace (in Costa Rica). Teodora is a socio-cultural researcher, editor, translator and journalist with international educational background and extensive professional experience in academia, NGOs and media organizations focusing on global contemporary social, cultural, and political issues, including social justice, environment, and human rights. Teodora has been involved in projects at the intersection of anthropology, advocacy journalism, storytelling and civic engagement aiming to promote perspectives and issues that are often underrepresented in the public discourse (especially Indigenous communities and movements on the frontlines of struggles for social and cultural justice, land rights, and Indigenous knowledge) and to raise awareness about the inequalities, lack of freedom and human rights violations worldwide.